Resolutions to prohibit the televising of any more Congressional hearings have been introduced in both the House and the Senate. Rep. Dwight L. Rogers (D., Fla.) explained the move by saying, ". . . it is not healthy for our people to daily look upon (the Army-McCarthy hearings) and conclude that all such workings of the committees of Congress are carried on in such a manner."

With all due respect to Mr. Rogers, the American people will decide what is healthy for them. They will make all such decisions themselves, through their elected representatives.

If television viewers want to think that all Congressional committees operate like the Mundt Committee, they are free to do so. And if Mr. Rogers wants to prove that other committees operate differently, the way to do it is to show those other committees to the public—not impose censorship.

Whatever else the Army-McCarthy hearings may have accomplished, they did bring to the attention of our people how one committee functioned. The long series of programs was the finest example of educational television since the Kefauver hearings, and we would be shocked and dismayed if Congress were to prohibit further telecasts of that nature.

If anything, there is too little television coverage of our Government. Sessions of both houses of Congress would—at times—not only make fascinating program material far superior to abstract lectures on government, but would accomplish what politicians have been screaming about for years. They would make all citizens take an interest in our Government, and know what was going on.

TV Teletype*

NEW YORK Bob Stahl reports:

Look who might play Fibber McGee and Molly on TV--FRAN ALLISON and RANSOM SHERMAN, latter an NBC personality in Chicago. They auditioned electronically for the show several weeks ago, with FRAN playing from Chicago, SHERMAN from California, NBC executives watching their efforts in New York via a closed circuit telecast. The program is being considered for the DAVE GARROWAY Friday night period beginning next fall.

Robert Young and his "Father Knows Best," a top-rated situation comedy on radio for years, are all set to go TV in the fall. The show is scheduled for Sunday nights on CBS, replacing The Web. Latter show will probably be canceled.

That ABC Bandstand show is now set for launching Saturday nights starting September 11. First half-hour will originate from the Hotel New Yorker's Terrace Room, with RALPH FLANAGAN and his orchestra on the stand. Second half-hour comes from Chicago's Aragon Ballroom, where ART MOONEY and his band will hold sway at least the first four weeks.

STEVE ALLEN and JAYNE MEADOWS have their marriage license safely in hand and now plan their big day about the middle of this month . . . Studio One is on the prowl for a super-duper drama to kick off the fall season, a la last year's "1984."

Isn't this carrying that subjective camera technique a little too far? "Lucky Louis," slated for ABC's Center Stage July 25, is to be telecast as seen through the eyes of a taxicab. And we always thought taxis had only headlights . . . PAUL GREGORY, producer of "The Caine Mutiny Court-Martial," will assist LELAND HAYWARD in production of NBC's Monday night spectaculars in the fall.

Although NBC has renewed MARGARET TRUMAN's option for next season, she'll be absent from TV all summer to act in summer stock shows . . . Baseball's Little League world championship game will be televised by CBS August 29.

It's now been decided that Meet Mister McNutley vacations this summer. It's to be replaced starting July 22 by What's in a Word. New panel quiz show will have CLIFTON FADIMAN as moderator and a panel comprising JIM MORAN, AUDREY MEADOWS, RUSSELL NYPE and ANNA LEE.

Martin Kane, now absent from TV, may return as a syndicated telefilm show. MARK STEVENS, last to play the private eye, wants to buy rights to the show to put it on film.

Dan Jenkins reports:

ALAN LADD will make his first guest appearance on RED SKELTON's summer show to plug the latest LADD picture . . . Though both ROY ROGERS and GENE AUTRY squawked something fierce, a court ruling now permits the release to TV of all their old feature movies made by Republic. They're coming this-a-way and ROGERS' TV film sponsor, General Foods, is already making unhappy noises about it.

BETTY BRONSON (Peter Pan, remember?) has put together a children's TV show . . . Columnist SHEILAH GRAHAM has signed to do a five-minute celebrity interview film series to follow a regular telenews newsreel.

STERLING HAYDEN makes his TV bow in an upcoming Playhouse of Stars episode, "Delay at Fort Bess" . . . One of the first DISNEY shows on ABC will be a long sequence titled "How Do You Doodle." The show is sold out, incidentally, and bows October 27 . . . EDDIE CANTOR, asked to reveal the format of his new film series, summed it up in one word—entertainment.

ED SULLIVAN's first Toast of the Town next season may very well be built around 20th Century Fox . . . JACK BENNY airs every other week next season alternating with Private Secretary, and will also continue his weekly radio shows.

Two new film series, Captain Midnight and Jet Jackson, Flying Commando, are actually the same identical show. Only the names have been changed . . . My Little Margie, the show that was never supposed to last more than 13 weeks, is all nice and renewed for its third full season. Shooting resumes July 27.

Twentieth Century Fox willing, SHEREE NORTH will appear on the July 11 Summer Comedy Hour . . . When RAY BOLGER, BOB HOPE, TONY MARTIN and RALPH EDWARDS filled in for the last BERLE show of the season when BERLE's mother died, none of them took one cent for his chores.

JO STAFFORD does the first Hollywood-originated CBS color show September 7 . . . It's official: December Bride replaces RED BUTTONS on Monday nights next season . . . A new film series based on Tugboat Annie is definitely in the works, possibly with MARJORIE MAIN. Who else?

JOAN CAULFIELD: "After you've done live TV there is nothing left in the world that can scare you any longer. You've had it" . . . The RAY BOLGER show has been renewed on ABC for next season. RAY's sponsor has just okayed production of 30 more telefilms . . . JAY LIVINGSTON and RAY EVANS, composers of the Oscar-winning "Buttons and Bows" tune, signed by MAX LIEBMAN to write an original score for the BETTY HUTTON spectacular September 12.

Call Me 'Uncle'

Why Frank Parker Revels In Being A Godfrey 'Family Man'

Frank Parker, who admits to being 51 years old, is having the "fun of his life" (his words) working on Arthur Godfrey's TV shows with a group of performers young enough to be his children. Frank never feels like a father to Lu Ann Simms, the McGuire Sisters and Godfrey's other friends, however. Godfrey, who won't be 51 until August, is the father. Frank says: "I'm only the uncle."

As friendly and affable off camera as he appears on stage, Parker nonetheless is a shrewd type of citizen. With some 30 years of show business behind him, fan clubs and autograph hounds are all old-hat to him now, but he recognizes their value to his new career with Godfrey and is happy to go along. And if that means looking soulfully into the pretty eyes of Marion Marlowe to give a bunch of housewife viewers a vicarious kick, then that's okay with Frank, too.

Told that hundreds of viewers have written TV Guide asking whether he and Marion really go for each other, Parker wisely hedged on the answer. "I take Marion out to parties occasionally," he said. "And viewers see us together on the show. What do they think is the truth?" The fact is, of course, that there never has been, is not now, and never will be a romance between Parker and La Marlowe.

Parker also has no illusions about building a new career for himself outside of The Godfrey's protecting wing. He has no ambitions to strike out on his own. "I've had several offers to do a single," he said, "but I'd never leave Arthur."

It was in 1945, shortly after his discharge from military service, that Parker decided to retire. "I was tired," he said, "and I had saved enough money to be financially independent." But, because of unfortunate investments, his independence was short-lived. Six years ago he was flat broke. "Then I started all over again in 1949 with Arthur," he said smilingly, "and got rich again."

Refuting publicity stories that Godfrey lent Parker a helping hand because he owed Frank a favor, Parker declared: "I never did anything for Arthur—we were just good friends. And he sure helped me. How else could a guy 48 or 49 get back into the business? Everybody else laughed at me. Then Arthur gave me a chance to do a guest shot on his show, and I've been doing that same guest shot now for 4½ years."

That alleged favor that Godfrey owed Parker occurred when Frank was a star tenor with the Chicago Opera Company, about 1938. They were singing "La Traviata" one week in Washington, D.C., where Godfrey had an early-morning disc jockey program on a local radio station.

"Arthur had heard me singing on the Jack Benny radio show," Frank said, "and he plugged our Washington appearance on his program all week. We sold out at every performance. I went up to his studio early one morning to thank him in person," Parker recalls, "and we sat and gabbed over his microphone for a few minutes. I didn't realize when he got up and walked out of the room that he had left me sitting with a hot mike. I caught the eye of the stand-by organist and signalled him to accompany me in a few songs—anything to fill time. Then, while I was singing, I saw Arthur standing in the doorway, laughing at my predicament.

"Arthur was an established performer then," he said, "and I'm certain my few songs that morning couldn't have helped his rating. So Arthur didn't owe me anything."

Frank, whose real family name is "Ciccio," was born in New York and started his singing career in a neighborhood church choir. His parents sent him to study at the Milan Conservatory in their native Italy. On his return, he got a job as a chorus boy in George M. Cohan's "Little Nellie Kelly" on Broadway. He worked in the chorus of several other Broadway productions and then formed a vaudeville act, labeled "Parker and Powell." The act never played the Palace. But Parker was getting experience and in 1927 he landed a secondary lead in a Broadway musical.

That was the year, too, when Parker began in radio, where he stayed until his retirement in 1945. He sang with many of radio's earliest stars, such as the A&P Gypsies and Will Rogers. In 1933 he joined Jack Benny's show and stayed until the show moved to Hollywood. He later had his own program, on which Bob Hope, then just beginning to make his mark as a comedian, was an early guest.

Since joining the Godfrey troupe, Parker has had to learn to ride a bike, iceskate, swim, do judo wrestling and just about everything else the cast does on the Wednesday night program. "The most important thing I've learned on this show," he said, "is to stay in good condition."

Occasionally Parker's deportment on the show would tend to dispute his basic shrewdness. But that's all part of the act. When he sits dead-pan or scowls while Arthur cracks jokes at his expense, it's because that's what Arthur and his producers want him to do. "After all," he said, "Arthur is the star and he must have enough foils on the show."

Aside from all that, it would seem that Parker knows a good thing when he sees one. "I'll do anything they ask me to do on the show," he said. "As I told you before, I'm not trying to build a new career for myself. All I want is a good job and as far as I'm concerned, I've found it with Arthur."

Mrs. Barry, shop owner, hems a dress for Russell Lee as Peggy Lemily watches.

Russell left the shop wearing a yellow Hattie Carnegie. She bought it for $20.

Peggy displays her choice to Prudy Wise. The attractive green dress cost just $25.

THEY'RE JUST RESOLD TO YOUNG TV HOPEFULS

For young TV actresses, models, ladies with couturier tastes but no champagne purse, Encore—A Resale Dress Shop is like finding a rich uncle.

The small, crowded shop, run by Mrs. Charles "Bud" Barry, wife of a National Broadcasting Co. vice-president, is one flight above New York's upper Madison Avenue. It sells—at bargain rates—creations by such top designers as Christian Dior and Jacques Fath. These, only slightly worn, are from the closets of the world's best-draped women.

The idea for the shop came to Mrs. Barry after years of attending network and sponsor parties. "I realized that the more clothes a woman owns, the more expensive her clothes are and the fewer times she is apt to wear them. The waste is appalling. I knew if there were some way to sell them, it would make a great many young girls in television happy."

Michael Marone, a tailor who shares shop space, fits a gown on Prudy Wise.

Three happy girls compare their buys. The shop serves many a TV hopeful.

Gowns Never Die

In business since February, Mrs. Barry has sold gowns belonging to Dinah Shore, Kathi Norris, Celeste Holm, Claire Mann, Jessica Tandy, and others too shy to tell. The first week, one Fifth Avenue matron sent over 49 dresses, eight of which had never been worn, most with Bergdorf Goodman and Saks Fifth Avenue custom shop labels. Entrepreneur Barry "gets what we can, works out a percentage arrangement with donors."

Some typical customers include red-haired cover girl Peggy Lemily, a top model angling for a TV break, who bought the orange Ceil Chapman gown that once belong to Kathi Norris; the green dress ($25) was from the personal wardrobe of an internationally known woman designer.

Blonde Russell Lee, who has appeared on The Martha Raye Show, left the shop wearing a $20 Hattie Carnegie of yellow silk that showed no signs of wear, and was lightly tossing the fur scarves (Jay Thorpe Fur Salon) she picked up for $42.

Another customer was brunette Prudy Wise, just returned from Hollywood and a series of bit movie parts, to seek TV work. Prudy picked up a blue gown that once was in wardrobe of Mrs. Lou Cowan, wife of a TV package producer.

As Peggy and Prudy were leaving, Celeste Holm telephoned offering a mink coat. Peggy thought "it wouldn't hurt to look," and asked the size.

Said Mrs. Barry: "Mink doesn't come in sizes. There is just mink size."

It's The Code Of

Nobody

The inviolable law of the Hollywood range reads that no cowboy rides alone, not even the Lone Ranger.

Clause A of the law reads further that a sidekick can be anything except a female, a clause which has been violated to a certain extent by Roy Rogers and, in reverse, by the new Annie Oakley Show. This latter bit of heresy starts right off with a female hero—an unheard of piece of Western chicanery which reportedly almost drove Gabby Hayes to cutting off his beard and turning legit.

The sidekick bit actually is nothing new, dating back to the days of the early Neanderthal man who had to have someone to talk to on how to build a fire. The cowpoke hero also must have someone to talk to, otherwise there would be no script. The cowpoke is not allowed to talk to girls except strictly on business, and talking to a horse can get monotonous.

Thus was born the pal, the foil, the harmless buffoon—the sidekick. He is the butt of the hero's jokes, the runner of his errands and the unflagging recipient of his kindly condescension. He is, in short, a happy goof.

The West, Pardner—

Rides Alone

The leading sidekick in today's crop of Western shows is undoubtedly Andy Devine, whose face, figure and well-sandpapered voice were a trademark for years on the movie screen. As Jingles in the Wild Bill Hickok series, he plays what might be called second bass fiddle to Guy Madison.

Ranking second to Devine is Pat Brady, who portrays an out-and-out idiot on the Roy Rogers Show. Dale Evans, of course, is co-starred with Roy and can hardly be classed as a sidekick. Brady is the dim but happy guy who rides about in a jeep called Nellybelle and is constitutionally incapable of doing anything right.

Oldest of all sidekicks in point of service is Tonto, the heroic Indian who aids the Lone Ranger. He never got around to studying English grammar, so his vocabulary is practically restricted to "Ugh" and "Tonto go."

To Edgar Buchanan, a former dentist, has fallen the role of Hopalong Cassidy's sidekick, Red Connors. Like Cassidy himself, the Connors of the TV show bears no recognizable resemblance to the original character as created by Clarence E. Mulford, but this is a trifling detail to a generation to whom Hoppy is Bill Boyd.

Gene Autry's whipping boy is a rough and ready lad by name of Pat Buttram, an old hand at Western stuff. He has played in so many Western movies that he can't remember a time when he wasn't either riding a horse or sliding a beer down the bar.

Another old timer, and a hero to Californians with or without television, is Leo Carrillo, who plays Pancho to Duncan Renaldo's Cisco Kid. Actually, Carrillo is better known than Renaldo. He's honorary mayor of virtually every town in the West and no parade or fiesta is complete without him.

Kit Carson, known better to his wife as Bill Williams, teams up with Don Diamond, better known to the kids as El Toro. The Ranger Rider, a comparative newcomer to the ranks and played by Jack Mahoney, bounces his lines off Dick Jones, an intelligent lad as sidekicks go.

Most radical of the sidekick clan, however, is young Jim Hawkins, an 11-year old who plays Gail Davis' kid brother in the brand-new Annie Oakley Series. He is perhaps rivaled in this respect by Jackie Coogan, of all people. The former child star, who once shared billing with Charlie Chaplin, is now content to ride the range as sidekick to Russ Hayden in the Cowboy G-Men series.

makes the pitch for

Eddie

Freddie Robbins, pitchman and host on The Eddie Fisher Show, didn't get to New York's Madison Avenue until recently, but he's already acquired the No. 1 characteristic of that ad agency neighborhood—"sincerity."

His driving ambition, he says sincerely, is to be "the face and voice of 'Coke' throughout the country."

An exceptional student, Fred was graduated from high school at 15, "goofed a couple of years playing tournament tennis and entered law school at 17 . . . because it seemed like a good kind of background to have." At 20, he had to wait before being admitted to the Bar.

After one year as a legal eagle, he quit to join a new Baltimore radio station as announcer and disc jockey. Interviewed by a high school reporter, he married the girl; now has two children.

In 1943, he journeyed to New York, where he achieved some measure of renown as the first person with enough stamina to emcee an all-night TV show. (It was tagged—appropriately—The All-Night Show.)

He ran a disc-spinning radio show, "The Robbins' Nest," from that glorified ice-creamery, Howard Johnson's. He owns nearly 50,000 records—long-hair, shorthair, bop. He's also an authority on the eating, sleeping, drinking and dating habits of Eddie Fisher. "The kids expect me to know everything about him."

Freddie first fell in love with his present sponsor when he emceed a local talent TV show for the juke box crowd, Do You Want To Be a Star? When Don Ameche left The Eddie Fisher Show, Freddie succeeded him.

He yearns to play Bill Holden-type roles—or, better yet, to emcee another all-night show for the same sponsor. This boy just adores soda pop.

Chicago Dateline

Week's Highlights: Tommy Bartlett marks his seventh year with Welcome Travelers July 7 in new surroundings. The anniversary comes just two days after he moves his W.T. depot from NBC to CBS, a shift that gives WBBM-TV (CBS outlet in the Windy City) its only Chicago origination. The move also necessitates a time shift for Tommy's WBKB show, Studio B for Bartlett, which will be seen, starting July 5, 3:30 P.M., on Channel 7, Win Stracke's former spot. Uncle Win thus moves again, this time to 10:30 A.M., Studio B's vacated morning period.

The summer season's occupational disease, TV replacements, is here again. Here's the latest batch: Don McNeill (who already has had Walter O'Keefe subbing for him between June 28 and July 2) continues his vacation while his WBKB Breakfast Club duties are under the competent supervision of Peter Donald (July 5-9), Walter Kiernan (July 12-16), and Dennis James (July 19-23).

Angel Casey's Playhouse will be inhabited by Two-Ton Baker while Mistress Casey takes a summer vacation from her Channel 7 duties July 3-16.

Over at WNBQ, Curley Bradley, radio actor, singer and guitarist, spells trainer John Conrad as Elmer The Elephant's stooge from July 5 to 9.

Advance Tips on Shows: DePaul University and WBBM-TV stage an experiment with educational opera on television July 10 on Operation New Horizons (9:30 A.M.). Vignettes from several operas will be featured.

Dorsey Connors rewards daughter Stephanie, for her high scholastic record with a trip to Europe July 16 to Aug. 8. While there, Dorsey will also pick up foreign ideas for her gimmick and travel shows on WNBQ. Chicago actress Geraldine Kay will pinch-hit for Dorsey.

Channel Chatter: Boston Blackie (Kent Taylor) and his gal friend, Mary (Lois Collier) open in There's Always a Murder at Drury Lane Theater, July 6. In their TV roles, they're seen locally at 9:30 P.M. Thursdays on WGN-TV.

ARE YOU MISS

KUP LAUNCHES

AN OPPORTUNITY to meet TV stars as official hostess of TV GUIDE awaits some fortunate young lady who will be named Miss TV GUIDE within the next few weeks. She will preside over the festivities at this magazine's fourth annual Celebrity Golf Tournament, July 25, 26 and 27 at St. Andrews' Golf Club in West Chicago.

TV GUIDE has chosen Irv Kupcinet, TV's dispenser of good will, gossip and gems of news interest, to pick the winner. Potential contestants should watch Kup's TV Column of the Air, seen at 10:45 P.M. weekdays on WBBM-TV. Beginning Monday, July 5, he will announce the details of the contest, repeating them each night for the following two weeks. The winner will also appear on Kup's show.

While winning the contest doesn't guarantee any movie or TV contracts, personal appearances or short cuts to fame, Miss TV GUIDE will meet and greet some of Chicago's favorite TV folk, as well as visiting guest celebrities. And it promises to be fun!

A Logical Choice

TV GUIDE'S choice of Kup as judge in this battle of the beauties is a fitting one. He is widely accepted as a connoisseur of charm and beauty by virtue of his hobnobbing with celebrities in the charmed circle of entertainment.

He is also a good example of that old bromide, local boy makes good—locally. Proof of his success is evidenced by the fact that he was even profiled in Time Magazine which seldom dallies with mediocre people. Their description—"a stage-struck footballer who loves to meet celebrities"—fits him as comfortably as his clothes.

Although he has passed (just slightly) the life-begins-at-40 mark, Kup still bears a physical resemblance to the youth who played football at Harrison Tech on Chicago's west side, at University of North Dakota, and later with the Philadelphia Eagles. He is 6-ft. 1-in. tall and weighs in the neighborhood of 220 pounds, all of which is enough to prevent most people from picking a fight with him. Following a shoulder injury in his fifth pro football game, Kup returned to his college love, the writing

Kudos for Kraft

I have just finished viewing the Kraft Theatre presentation of "Romeo and Juliet" and I thought it was magnificent. Susan Strasberg and Liam Sullivan were excellent in the starring roles. It takes a great deal of ability and hard work to properly interpret Shakespeare. The performances of these stars reflected both of these qualities. I certainly hope that Kraft will present more of these masterpieces.—Mrs. Willard C. Perkins, Jr., Lake In The Hills, Ill.

Just Say "Namastey!"

Our vote goes to the Nite Owl Movie.

Terry

We not only enjoy the fine movies, but also Ron Terry. He should be given a lot of credit for the excellent job he does. He always ends his show by saying, "Namastey." We have been trying to figure out the meaning but we've had no success. Could you tell us?—Mr. and Mrs. William Kinsler, Chicago, Ill. (Ron, who lived in India for three years, tells us that "Namastey" is a greeting or a departing gesture in Hindustani. Translated it means, "I bow to you" or "May the gods go with you!"—Ed.)

The Name's The Same

A few weeks ago Ralph Edwards presented on This Is Your Life the story of a former narcotics addict. One of the people brought from this girl's past was named Jack Dempsey. Since then I have had an argument as to whether or not this was the former heavyweight champion. Was it?—Mrs. Mary Granata, Riverside, Ill. (It was not the Jack Dempsey of boxing fame.—Ed.)

Statians reserve the right ta make last-minute changes.

Four Star Playhouse

Because of the marquee value of a movie star's name, any telefilm series which can spotlight Dick Powell, Charles Boyer and David Niven week after week should have little to worry about. And Four Star Playhouse is that lucky.

Of course, the stories that the stars enact are just as important as their box-office lure because, to coin a cliche, the play is still the thing. Fortunately, the Four Star stories have been consistently good. The show, as a result, is one of the better half-hour dramatic series.

Don't get confused over that title. Even though Powell, Boyer and Niven, no matter how you count them, total only three stars, the show can still honestly be called Four Star Playhouse. Every fourth program is reserved for a guest star—such top-name personalities as Ida Lupino, Joan Fontaine, Ronald Colman and Broderick Crawford.

Much of the show's high quality can be traced to the manner in which stories are pegged to the individual talents of each star. Some of the scripts have been offbeat: Boyer, for example, played a sensitive blind person undergoing surgery to regain his sight; Powell was a test pilot for jet aircraft. Each of the three has been a well-established Hollywood name and knows his way around on a TV movie set. Which is to say that the acting is usually great. So are the guest stars and the stories handed them. Supporting players are culled from among the top Hollywood feature actors. Production backgrounds, direction and film quality are also of the best.

Joe Palooka

Joe Kirkwood as Joe Palooka: for children.

Joe Palooka, according to that comic strip, has always been a clean-living, high-minded and rather dull heavyweight champ. He knows from nothing about gambling, fixed fights, blonde sirens and night clubs. And that's exactly the way Joe is portrayed in the new series, Joe Palooka Story.

So to the kids, he's undoubtedly the personification of what a sports champ should be. And since the show is obviously pitched to a juvenile audience, that makes it an acceptable entry in the telefilm sweepstakes.

Joe Kirkwood and Cathy Downs, who have played the champ and his wife Ann Howe in numerous movies, hold down the same roles in the TV show. They look and act sufficiently like the comic strip characters to get by. Sid Tomack, one of Marie Wilson's boy friends on My Friend Irma, and Luis Van Rooten have both played Knobby Walsh and both have been good. Slapsie Maxie Rosenbloom, no stranger to the fight business, has been added to the cast to provide comedy relief. Sometimes he succeeds.

The stories are mixed fairly well. Besides defending his title, Joe more frequently shows his true worth by backing the underdog against evil forces.—R.S.

FINE TUNING

By OLLIE CRAWFORD

Viewers protest canned laughter on TV shows. One guy listened to the canned laughter all evening. Then he attacked his TV set with a can opener.

Canning laughs is not as popular as bottling giggles.

Canned laughter is not what you get when you pack 40 sardines and a feather in the same container. When it comes to laughing at a comic, it's practically a mechanical relative.

They usually record it at the zoo by feeding laughing gas to the hyenas.

TV is the first medium where they do the applause first, and build the show around it.

The average comic spends so much for the laugh track, he can't buy any jokes. He just records the noise his friends make when he tries to tell them he's a comic.

Every time he lays an egg, the sound track cackles.

Friend of ours says they ought to stop canning the laughter, and can the comic.

Grapes inspire clowning by Joan Davis, r., and daughter, Beverly Wills.

Crazy Mixed-Up Kid?

Despite The Signs, Joan Davis Knows Her Way Around

Over the doorway to Joan Davis' private office at Hollywood's General Service Studios is a sign reading: "Through These Portals Pass the Most Mixed-Up Kids in the World."

As visitors leave the office, they see another sign: "And You Thought You Were Mixed-Up Before!"

Since this office houses the president of Joan Davis Productions,

Joan Davis and supporting comic.

Joan does housekeeping the hard way.

. . . And finds "art" offers problems, too.

Inc.—a company involved in the making of 39 TV films per year with an annual budget of more than $1,000,000—it's no wonder some people think show business is screwy.

Miss Davis, however, is hardly a screwball. "Our business," she says, "is comedy. So why should we be stuffed shirts about it?"

On or off stage, Joan Davis seems to know what she's doing. One of Hollywood's few veteran comediennes, she has long ago learned that even her straight lines come out with a wryly comic inflection, and she is content to let it go at that.

It hasn't always been so easy, however. After touring five years on the Pantages vaudeville circuit as a child comedienne, Joan let her parents persuade her to go back to school where, eventually, she was called on to deliver a high school valedictory. "It was a serious speech," she remembers, "and I had to play it straight. Toughest assignment I've ever had."

Born in St. Paul, Minn., some years ago, she rapidly proved to be an uninhibited and extraordinarily bright little girl. To her parents' bewilderment, she entered an amateur contest at age seven. She won that one and 26 more, finally turning "pro."

Once out of high school, she fled to New York and teamed up with an itinerant "straight man," Si Wills. They were married in 1931 and have a daughter, Beverly, who at 21 is a bride and an actress in her own right on both radio and TV.

By the time she was 14, Beverly's voice sounded exactly like her mother's, a coincidence which enabled Beverly to get in on all sorts of grown-up gossip via telephone. When Beverly reached 16, however, Joan got back at her. Passing herself off as her daughter, she calmly called three boys and made dates with them for the same night. Since then, both have observed a telephone truce.

Joan reached her motion picture peak as a knockabout comedienne in the late Thirties, then moved into the radio field with Rudy Vallee, winding up with her own show in 1943. For eight years "The Joan Davis Show" was a radio staple.

Early in 1953, with a few more movies under her belt, Joan decided it was time to do something about television. Gathering a staff around her, she mulled over one idea after another. The end result: I Married Joan. A husband was dragged into the proceedings to give madcap Joan something solid to fall back on. Jim Backus, with whom she had worked often in radio, was a "natural."

Gags or not, the making of a comedy show is a serious matter. It's a rare occasion when anyone does any laughing. A director will nod solemnly and say, "Yes, that's a very funny line." A writer will sit in a corner and brood darkly. On a particularly hectic day on the Davis set, a matronly visitor from Boston approached Joan and asked innocently, "Miss Davis, I've enjoyed you for so many years on radio. Tell me, why did you decide to give up comedy for this?"

No show-wise jury would have convicted her, but Joan elected to forego murder. Pulling herself together, she said, "Dear, I realize it may not look like a comedy now, but when you see the entire show, I think you will see that I have not given it up. At least, I hope not." The matron was gently eased off the premises and Joan went back to the business of being funny. Nobody laughed until six weeks later when the show finally hit the air. It was a very funny show.

Divorced from Si Wills since 1944, Joan's three major avocations are golf, deep-sea fishing and Beverly.

Relaxed on both golf course and fishing boat, Joan tends to tighten up on the set, is occasionally moody and at times downright depressed. But she bounces back the minute the camera starts to roll. Six weeks later she even laughs out loud. It is her fond hope that the lady from Boston has a television set.

No madcap when cameras aren't rolling, Joan checks script for next day's shooting.

HENNY YOUNGMAN SAYS
TV LEAVES COMEDIANS

No Time For Comedy

Henny Youngman is a mournful comedian—and all because of television. TV, he feels, has taken most of the fun out of being funny. "TV programs," he sadly paraphrases, "are breaking up that old gang of mine."

Youngman and other New York-based comics—Milton Berle, Bob Hope, Jackie Gleason, Red Buttons, Jan Murray, Morey Amsterdam, Jack Carter—once buddy-buddied. They convened in the early A.M. hours for "joke jam sessions," conspired to disrupt each other's performances, amiably lifted laugh lines.

But that was pre-TV. All this camaraderie, Youngman laments, has now gone down a 21-inch drain.

That's because TV's tension is murder. Trying to be humorous in weekly

TV's funnymen still convene on special occasions like the "bachelor party" on the eve of Milton Berle's wedding. On hand were: (1) Sid Caesar; (2) the groom-to-be; (3) Jan Murray; (4) Gene Baylos; (5) George Raft; (6) Joe E. Lewis; (7) Sam Levenson; (8) Henny Youngman; (9) Joey Adams; (10) Eddie Fisher; (11) Red Buttons; (12) Morey Amsterdam.

In the "good old days," Youngman recalls wistfully, members of the fracture-'em fraternity always gravitated toward favorite restaurants and barber shops. "Even before you walked in the door, you could hear the lines coming from left to right."

It was always open season on funnymen. Every comic constantly had to prove he could both "dish it out" and "take it." If any member of the club gave signs of a ballooning ego, his confreres promptly punctured it.

"I once phoned Red Buttons at 6 in the morning," Youngman reminisces, "and said I was a newspaper reporter. So for 20 minutes he told me the story of his life.

"When Berle first started on television, he was always blowing a whistle to show his authority at rehearsals. One day when we were talking there was a slight sound outside. Milton whipped out the whistle. 'No one's near us,' I told him, 'you just blew the whistle on yourself.'

"In those days, if a guy got out of hand, you murdered him. Now, if you make fun of a winner, people say you're jealous."

In pre-TV days, pranks were nonstop. Berle, Hope and Youngman toured movie houses at midnight, seeking previews. Deploying, they'd fire snide remarks at the screen.

Miltie and Henny constantly vied to precede each other on benefit platforms. The first man on — usually Berle, says Youngman—would gleefully do the other's routine.

TV, with its generous loot, should have brought on a renaissance of post-working-hour fun, Youngman feels, but for the Happiness Boys, happy days are not here again.

"Unless you have a TV show of your own, they give you the brush. There's a caste system. They're interested only in the overdog."

TV comedy is too hectic, he believes. So many dollars ride on every punch line that comedians have grown worried, introverted, suspicious.

"Some TV comedians," Youngman says dolefully, "are even losing their sense of humor"; others, he adds, never had any. "TV is a haven for 'manufactured comics.' A lot of the people on TV you can't respect. Others are charm or personality comedians who get their biggest laughs with a grin, instead of funny material."

To performers like these, TV's destruction of the old fraternizing among comedians doesn't matter. It's the "solid funnymen," the ones who specialize in "bombshell humor," Youngman feels, whose increasingly anemic work reflects the new isolation. The old rowdy give-and-take, he's convinced, served to whet their wit.

Care and Feeding of TV Sets

. . . OR WHEN IN DOUBT, CALL THE SERVICE MAN

You're a handy guy around the house. You can fix the electric iron, rewire a lamp or replace the tubes in the radio. And you think you can take care of your own television repairs instead of spending dough for them.

Brother, look out! You're heading for trouble.

Manufacturers' technical experts pass along the word that a television set is far more complicated than a radio, and unless you know something about electronics, you had better watch your step.

TV Guide asked the experts a few questions about doing minor repairs on television sets. "When in doubt, call your serviceman," the experts replied, with fine commercial monotony.

Above all, they said, do not monkey with the picture tube. It may make a monkey out of you. The tube is a delicate item. In the wrong hands, it may also be a dangerous instrument.

Basically, your picture tube is a hunk of glass filled with vacuum. A good jolt by an untrained hand may break the glass. When that happens, the tube is useless. Even if you contrive not to break the tube, you may jar it out of whack.

More important is the fact that breaking the glass may cause the vacuum to draw in air from the surrounding countryside, producing an "implosion." An implosion is a bursting inward: opposite of explosion. General symptoms are loud noise and flying glass. Im or ex, it is a plosion and mighty dangerous.

Do not remove the back of your set to dust inside. Since most sets are dustproof, no dust should be there. If there is, let your serviceman clean it out. He knows how. If you go groping around inside your set, you may come in contact with high voltage currents. Even with the set turned off, there is residual voltage in the picture tube which can easily knock you for a station break.

Rear panel controls were placed in the rear of your set for a good reason: to keep you from getting your paws on them. Some of these controls work interdependently. If you adjust one, you may very easily snarl another.

If interference develops while you are using your set, it will not help to kick it, slap it or swear at it. But a repairman could probably trace the interference to some defective electrical appliance in your home or your neighbor's. Interference may also be caused by a passing truck or airplane.

Wiping the face of the set (the trade calls it the protective glass) helps keep the glass clean and the housewife busy. But it does nothing sensational for the set. If you must clean your screen, use a dry cloth. Moisture from a wet cloth can seep into the works and give your set the equivalent of sinus trouble.

Do not flip the channel selector rapidly from station to station. Speed can wear out the tuning mechanism.

It is a wise practice to turn your selector to the desired channel before turning on the set. The picture you want will come up without a lot of white stuff flashing at you first. This white stuff between channels may lead you to think the set is out of tune. This in turn may cause knob twisting which can produce hocus of the focus or mixture of the picture.

Keep the volume down when turning on your set or switching from channel to channel. A sudden blast of sound may damage your speaker, your nerves or your relations with the neighbors.

Do not place your set near a source of intense heat such as a radiator, stove or fireplace. Intense heat may damage condensers. Most receivers are insulated against normal heat. But not against roasting.

In an electric storm, your antenna is not apt to be a hazard. Most antennae are equipped with a lightning arrester, which grounds electricity before it can ground you.

A television set is neither a greater nor a lesser fire hazard than any other household electrical appliance. When you go away for a vacation it is wise to disconnect all appliances. Best way to do this is to pull the main power switch in your home. This is a precaution against fire caused by defective or exposed wiring anywhere.

The industry is too new to have life expectancy figures on television sets. However, many very early models are still functioning, and, properly maintained, your set can give you a lot of fun for a lot of years.

Best way to insure long life for your set: keep your hands off it.

REGIONAL RECIPES:

In Los Angeles, it's Tacos

Mama Weiss loves to cook. But Mama loves people, too, and it gets lonesome in a kitchen. So when Eddie Coontz, of KHJ-TV, Los Angeles, suggested a television show of her own, Mama just packed up her apron and skillet.

Well-known for many years through her Beverly Hills restaurant as one of California's finest cooks, she surprised everyone by becoming overnight one of the most popular and best-loved personalities in local TV.

Asked to name a typical Los Angeles dish for TV Guide, Mama cited enough recipes to fill a book, then picked Tacos.

Tacos

12 tortillos; 1 lb. ground beef, pork or chicken; 1 lorge onion, clove garlic (chopped); 2 green bell peppers (chopped); 1 con chili souce; 1 t. Tobosco souce; solt & pepper; groted cheese; ½ heod (chopped) lettuce; 2 or 3 tomotoes; toothpicks.

Mix meot with onions, peppers ond gorlic. Cook. When done, odd chili, Tobosco, solt ond pepper. Dip eoch tortillo on both sides in tepid oil in frying pon. When plioble, fill with meot-chili mixture, fold over, pin with toothpick. Fry slowly in oil on both sides until brown. Before serving, stuff lettuce and tomatoes in top, sprinkle with cheese.

Mama: with Tacos, sweet-potato-stuffed orange shells.

Can An Expert Survive?

Tommy Loughran, a former light-heavyweight champion of the world, looks like television's best bet to become a former commentator on fights. He is far too good to last.

Loughran works at ringside in Brooklyn's Eastern Parkway, whose fights go over ABC on Monday evenings. He combines qualities so rare in the microphone mob that it's a wonder he wasn't automatically disqualified without an audition.

He has a genuinely expert knowledge of boxing acquired in 18 years as one of the wiliest and most skillful operatives in the ring. He has the gift of expressing himself clearly and simply. He has the candor to say exactly what he thinks. How can he possibly survive?

Tommy also has an elegant Oxford accent picked up as a young member of the Mayfair set of South Philadelphia but this, unlike his other attributes, does not set him apart in a medium where rich and fruity diction is stock equipment.

It has been a rewarding experience to hear Loughran present his perceptive observations during a fight and then kick the gong around in post-bout sessions with such lively guests as Jack Dempsey and that master of managerial brigandage, Dr. Jack Kearns.

Insatiable television brought the shelf-worn heavyweight, Joe Baksi, back to the ring in a bout which Loughran attended. Tommy said in effect that Baksi was fat and old and shouldn't be allowed on the unsafe side of the ropes. This was honest and accurate reporting, as Baksi proved, but a gratified listener had to wonder how warmly such candor would endear Tommy to promoters and sponsors.

When Joey Maxim outpointed Floyd Patterson, Loughran called attention frequently to the tactics Maxim employed to capitalize on his experience while awaiting the decision. Tommy said that although Patterson might not appreciate it for years to come, he would some day be grateful to Maxim for this boxing lesson.

The three officials concurred in this view, all voting for Maxim, but others at ringside dissented. It doesn't matter much whether Loughran's judgment was sound or faulty in this instance, for everyone is entitled to a margin of error. The gratifying thing was the contrast between this qualified observer's honest statement of opinion and the exasperating double-talk usually heard from the ignorant.

Already, though, there have been rumbles of discontent. From viewers who thought Patterson won, there have been letters implying that Loughran was deliberately coloring his comments to set the stage for a prearranged decision.

TV audiences are suspicious of plain, unvarnished truth. They're not accustomed to it.

On the 178th anniversary of America's birth, TV GUIDE is deeply appreciative of the high privilege of being part of free television
